IMPORTANT COMPANY DOCUMENTS - PLEASE READArticles of Organization

(Sometimes called Certificate of Organization or Certificate of Formation)

This is the document that is required to be filed with the state in order to effect the formation of the LLC. The articles/certificate will contain the information that is required by state statutes, and will be marked by the state to indicate the date the LLC was officially filed (in some cases the date may be shown on a separate filing receipt). This document is required in order to open a bank account in the name of the LLC (and the filing receipt, as well, if this is a New York LLC).

Federal EIN

This is the Federal Employer Identification Number issued for the LLC issued by the Internal Revenue Service. This is the identifying federal tax number for the LLC, and is used when filing taxes and handling employee wage withholding requirements. This document is required in order to open a bank account in the name of the LLC, as well as file any and all necessary federal tax forms.

LLC Operating Agreement

This is a private agreement between the members (owners) of the LLC. It is quite similar to a partnership agreement for a general partnership, but for an LLC it is typically called an operating agreement. The operating agreement provided herein has been customized with your LLC name and ownership information, and covers the main items that a standard operating agreement would be expected to cover. This is intended for your use and assistance, however you are not required to use this operating agreement, and you may change it in any way you see fit.

The operating agreement is an internal company document, and is not filed with any person or agency. An operating agreement is not required (except for New York - see note below), although it is certainly a good idea, especially if there is more than one member of the LLC. The operating agreement may be adopted or altered at any time by agreement of the members.

Statement and Resignation of the Organizer

When an LLC is filed with the state, the person filing the necessary documents is known as the organizer. The title of organizer does not convey any ownership over the LLC, however in order to avoid confusion and make that very clear, we prepare this document for you.

The organizer stipulates who the members (owners) of the LLC, and resigns from any and all involvement/ownership/control of the LLC real or perceived.

This is an internal company document, and is not filed with any person or agency. It can sometimes be helpful in opening a bank account, like the banking resolution described above, especially in states which do not list names of the members on the filed LLC Articles.

Banking Resolution

The banking resolution is a simple document which authorizes the members of the LLC to open a bank account for the LLC. This is an internal company document, and is not filed with any person or agency.

The banking resolution is not necessarily required to open an account, however it can often be helpful, especially for states which do not list the names of the members on the filed LLC Articles.

The limited liability company shall have the right to buy the interest of any dissociated member at fair market value.

19. Dissolution. The limited liability company shall dissolve upon the unanimous consent of all the members or upon any event requiring dissolution under state law. In the event of the death, bankruptcy, permanent incapacity, or withdrawal of a member the remaining members may elect to dissolve or to continue the operation of the LLC.

20. General Provisions. This agreement is intended to represent the entire agreement between the parties. In the event that any party of this agreement is held to be contrary to law or unenforceable, said party shall be considered amended to comply with the law and such holding shall not affect the enforceability of other terms of this agreement. This agreement shall be binding upon the heirs, successors, and assigns of the members.

IN WITNESS whereof, the members of the limited liability company sign this agreement and adopt it as their operating agreement this 4th day of August, 2020.
